The Results Of Secular Statism (With Dr. Carl Jung & R.J. Rummel)

By William H. Douglas ~ TheLatterDayLiberator.com

This week we continue our study into the nature of statism (“state-ism”) and political servitude as found in The Undiscovered Self by Dr. Carl Jung. Last week we discovered that the development of secularism doesn’t stop humans from worshipping. The drive to worship is a human psychological necessity, an undeniable drive built directly into the human mind. When a society secularizes and everyone is an atheist, the drive to worship doesn’t disappear, worship is merely transferred from God or the gods to new secular institutions. This worship almost always is given to the state, the political and government powers which rule the nation and promise to solve all the problems of mortality in order to usher in an earthly paradise. This week we continue to explore how the process of secularization doesn’t lead to an atheist utopia, it leads to the worship of the Cult of the State. From Dr. Carl Jung, page 54:

*Far too little attention has been paid to the fact that our age, for all its irreligiousness, is hereditarily burdened with the specific achievement of the Christian epoch: the supremacy of the word, of the Logos, which stands for the central figure of our Christian faith. The word has literally become our god and so it has remained, even if we know of Christianity only from hearsay. Words like “society” and “State” are so concretized that they are almost personified. In the opinion of the man on the street, the “State,” far more than any king in history, is the inexhaustible giver of all good; the “State” is invoked, made responsible, grumbled at, and so on and so forth. Society is elevated to the rank of a supreme ethical principle; indeed, it is credited with positively creative capacities.

Logos is “the divine reason implicit in the cosmos, ordering it and giving it form and meaning.” (Britannica, Logos) This ancient Grecian concept became the basic for the Western ideal of the nature and meaning of all Creation. With the advent of Christianity, the Logos became the revelation of the purpose, power, and nature of reality as manifested in the person of Jesus Christ, the Word (or Logos) of God. (See John 1:1) Thus, the Logos was literally God as the Logos is Christ and Christ is God. Therefore, in the Logos, in the Word of God, could one find all meaning and purpose. And though our modern age seems to increasingly pride itself on its secularism, it has, as Jung explained, inherited this religious reliance upon a singular Word to be the organizing and meaning giving principle of all existence.

Today though it is not Jesus which acts as the primary vehicle for meaning, it is the State. The State, with its endless bureaucracies and seemingly limitless supply of functionaries, with its universal presence in human life, with its all-knowing prophetic politicians, with its claim to inexhaustible wealth, with its seemingly endless power to reorganize all of life and society on the whims of the political elite. It is the State which tells us our place in society, our purpose in existing, that determines when and where we live, and claims the authority to dictate to us everything from who and how we can love to what we can eat or drink, even how we can die.

It is the State which tells us who to love and how to hate. From childhood we are indoctrinated into its ideology and taught to excommunicate as apostate traitors those who question its authority. All that good comes from it, and to question it is to be heretic to be derided in the worst terms the present age can muster – racist, homophobe, sexist, transphobe, greedy, callous, hateful, grandma killer, etc. – no matter how its actions destroy your individual life.

The Logos of the present day, the God of the Modern Age, has become the State itself.

And, founded upon human sacrifice, it is the bloodiest god that has ever ruled.

The 20th century saw steady decline in religion all through its latter half while agnosticism and atheism have only grown. (Pew, Decline of Christianity Continues) We live in an increasingly secular age, an age which has saw more blood and horror than any before it. In his work Power Kills, Dr. R.J. Rummel studied the mass murders of the 20th century and all of them were secular states, with the worst being the atheist nations. At least 61,911,000 people were slaughtered by the secular Socialist regime of the Soviet Union. Between 35,000,000 and 45,000,000 were murdered by the atheist Socialist Chinese regime under Mao alone. The secular National Socialists in Germany murdered over 20,000,000. The secular nationalists in China murdered over 10,000,000 before losing to Mao's socialist forces. (See the Power Kills website maintained by the University of Hawaii for more examples.)

In these few secular and atheistic nations alone, we see between 151,000,000 and 161,000,000 people murdered in some of the most horrific, brutal, evil manners possible. Why? Because the worship of the State leads to subservience and obedience to it. In pursuit of its promises of secular perfection, Eden on Earth, nothing is forbidden and everything is permissible. When you eliminate God that means there is no higher authority than the Government and the difference between good and evil rest upon its whims. And the whims of the State are always towards increasing its power. If a few people die, so what? You can't have Paradise without breaking a few eggs. Or skulls.

The result of the deification of the Government has been the greatest suffering and slaughter ever seen in all of human history, both in quantities and qualities. The secular Cult of the State is one built on human sacrifice in a quantity that would've put the Aztecs and Mayans to shame.

The Foundation Of Natural Law ~ Morality Without Religion

By Victor Johnson

In trying to assess the reality in which we live, one should either accept the idea that when creation came into existence, that Law, both Physical Law (physics) and Spiritual Law came with it, or that only creation came into existence without Law. Mainstream science itself has to admit that Physical Laws govern everything. How science loves physics, teaching it all the way into the highest universities yet, refusing to acknowledge any Spiritual Laws what so ever, their thought pattern goes like this: if one cannot see it, measure it, or weigh it, then it cannot exist.

The fourth Hermetic Principle is Polarity, everything has an opposite. Day and night, left and right, up and down, the cardinal points on a compass, etc. Then for there to be a Physical, then there must be a Spiritual, the seen and the unseen. By refusing to accept the Spiritual aspect of creation, mainstream science becomes unbalanced. The book of James says that “A double minded man is unstable in ALL of his ways.” Nicola Tesla said, “the day that science seriously looks into the unseen world as well as the seen world, then we would learn more in a year than everything that we have learned previously.”

For Law to exist, it must be easily perceived, common to all and obliging to all equally. One cannot expect to jump out of an airplane without a parachute and expect not to become seriously injured or killed. Why? Because a Natural Law was violated. As well, if one chooses to live on potato chips, hot dogs and beer, one should not be surprised if their health has been affected. It may take some time, but it will happen for the same reason, a Law was violated. The results can happen very suddenly or it may take a while, depending on what Law was not adhered to.

Spiritual Law operates on the same Principle. Objective Moral Law, similarly said and noted by individuals like C.S. Lewis, Lysander Spooner, Elihu Palmer and Mark Passio, is easily perceived, common to all, and obliging to all, connatural, which means connected by Nature. It is inborn, in other words, our Conscience. If we ignore our Conscience, then the only thing that can keep us in check is the fear of getting caught, and there is NO Morality in that. Acknowledging Natural Law is NOT dependent on it working or not. No belief is required. It does what it does because that is what it was designed to do. Perhaps there was a watchmaker God who designed this clock, wound it up and left to do other things. People are not zapped by a lightening bolt when they do something wrong because Natural Law, also known as Karma will deliver the behavioral consequences for actions, good or bad. Karmic Law additionally cannot make exceptions, for neglectful grieving parents who lost a child falling off of a cliff or for the child itself, because if it did, then it wouldn't be a Law. Sometimes what we call miracles do occur that we cannot fully explain, but as the Hermetic Principles teach us “what is perceived as random chance is really a Law unrecognized as yet.”

Spiritual Laws just like the Physical Laws can be discovered and understood, it is indeed our responsibility to discover and understand them. Everything, not just physics, is governed by Law. There are Laws that govern good health, music, mathematics, freedom, nothing is ungovernable, and we learn through time. Karmic Law is nothing to fear, do good and one will receive good, practice bad behavior and the results of that behavior will be made manifest. Real Law must be unchanging, consistent and absolute or it wouldn't be Law. Ask yourself, why is it most cultures teach the golden rule or share a similar morality?

Human Government vs The Government of God (1800s Writing)

By The Non-Resistant 19th Century Abolitionist Newspaper

That Human Governments are opposed to the Government of God, and that true Liberty which is to be found only in the kingdom of God, will be obvious to all who will consider their origin and true character. They are vain attempts of man to establish an order of things by which those who live in rebellion against God, and in continual opposition to the principles of Truth and Love, may secure to themselves by physical force, that which can be found and enjoyed only by yielding to the influence and acting in accordance with these holy principles. They are the vain efforts of men to rival God, and live independent of his government, and this to make their wisdom answer better than the wisdom of God. Vain attempts of mankind, while determined upon living in open rebellion against the great moral Governor of the universe, to make laws by which, they may govern one another.

And what has been the influence of these efforts, and these laws? Have they ever had the effect to change men's characters? Do they not always 'work wrath,' and increase crime in every community? Is it not sufficiently obvious, that legal penalties and outward restraints cannot produce inward purity and obedience? It is their natural and universal tendency to excite and redouble the strength of those very passions and propensities which they are intended to restrain.

Man was designed to be governed by a Law within himself; the Moral Law of God, implanted in his moral nature; engraven on his heart; or affections; and if he lives in rebellion against this Law, and thus sets at naught the government of God, he is not to be governed at all. If he will not be governed by God, he is not to be governed by his fellow men, who are equally rebels against God as he is himself. While men are rebels against God's government, they are in reality rebels against all government; for there is in reality but one government in the universe, and that is the government of God. All attempts to establish human government, are but so many rebellious combinations of men, which will be scattered and brought to naught.

All the attempted governments of men are unwarranted assumptions of power, without right or authority. Vain and impious efforts of men to set up substitutes for the perfectly wise, holy, and righteous government of God, which they are openly rebelling against, and thus to exalt their wisdom above the wisdom of God. Will it be said, that they all acknowledge allegiance to God, and his government? It is solemn mockery for them to make any such pretensions; since every man of them lives in continual rebellion against God, and his government.

Every individual who is living in violation of God's Law is living in open rebellion against God's government: the only righteous and real government upon earth. Every individual who is thus living without any government at all. And all the pretension he may make to being under a human government, is but a 'refuge of lies' a refuge to which he retreats to quiet the rebukes of his own conscience, and to secure and serve his selfish purposes.

Human governments are an invention of men, by which they are vainly endeavoring to live independent of God, and to exalt and aggrandize themselves by the toil and servitude of their more ignorant fellow men. What are the distinguishing characteristics of all the human governments upon earth, but pride and arrogance, iniquity and injustice? What is their history, but a history of wrongs and injuries? What is their standard of proceeding as invariably exhibited in their practice, but the principle that might makes right? What is their main spring to action, but self-interest, cupidity, and self-aggrandizement? What is their trust for defense and security, but physical strength military prowess mere brute force?

All human governments make it a point of honor to kill their enemies: and thus vainly strive to correct and overcome wrong with wrong. He has only to choose between tacitly assenting to be one of a confederacy which violates the principles of Truth and Righteousness, or preserve his individual integrity, his peace of conscience and liberty of soul, by speaking out fearlessly, and then going, if need be, cheerfully to prison or to death.

“For those who stubbornly seek freedom, there can be no more urgent task than to come to understand the mechanisms and practices of indoctrination. These are easy to perceive in the totalitarian societies, much less so in the system of ‘brainwashing under freedom’ to which we are subjected and which all too often we serve as willing or unwitting instruments.”
