

Send Us Your Article

Our Country is the World, our Countrymen are all Mankind.

TheLiberator.us

Date: 6/8/2024 Edition 40. Main Editors: Cory Edmund Endrulat, William H. Douglas

Most Popular 19th Century Play-Writer Was An Artistic Anarchist

By Cory Edmund Endrulat, Excerpts by Oscar Wilde

If there was ever a writer that came after William Shakespeare as a great poet and playwright, who challenged the mainstream norm of ideas, it was Oscar Wilde. He was a man who sought freedom through the use of art, known for his wit, eloquence and flamboyant personality. Born in 1854, his radical ideas regarding freedom came fashionably thereafter the Abolitionists in America and their struggle to end chattel slavery which many attacked at the time as “utopian” or “impractical” or even straight-out wrong. Whilst many people may look toward Wilde’s life experiences and different forms of theatrical arts, his artistic view on politics deserves some attention, especially as it may come to be quite shocking in regards to our present world and the fears people have about a better world. Wilde shares with us the untold slavery of our modern times, much like the great writer Leo Tolstoy, yet few historians may be willing to make this connection and share the following excerpts.

On the slavery that was said to have ended in America from the “U.S. Civil War,” Wilde shares with us how slaves regretted their new form of “freedom,” stating “slaves themselves they received, not merely very little assistance, but hardly any sympathy even; and when at the close of the war the slaves found themselves free, found themselves indeed so absolutely free that they were free to starve, many of them bitterly regretted the new state of things.” This is similar to what was said by untold historical figures such as Lysander Spooner and Gustave de Molinari among many others. These individuals commonly said that the freedom the slaves got was not true freedom, and we may also understand that the rough conditions for the freed slave cannot justify their re-enslavement.

On our slavery to material things, Wilde states “Pity he has, of course, for the poor, for those who are shut up in prisons, for the lowly, for the wretched; but he has far more pity for the rich, for the hard hedonists, for those who waste their freedom in becoming slaves to things.” Regarding and predicting the rise of technology in regards to freedom, he states, “human slavery is wrong, insecure, and demoralising. On mechanical slavery, on the slavery of the machine, the future of the world depends.”

On the slavery that still exists in full vigor within the jailing systems of the modern day, Wilde having direct experience within it being controversially locked up for a consensual “vice,” stated that “prison life with its endless privations and restrictions makes one rebellious. The most terrible thing about it is not that it breaks one’s heart— hearts are made to be broken—but that it turns one’s heart to stone.”

He provides more context on the nature of slavery, it’s dangerous foundation upon mental slavery that still exists today and the role of Abolitionists. “Just as the worst slave- owners were those who were kind to their slaves, and so prevented the horror of the system being realised by those who suffered from it, and understood by those who contemplated it, so, in the present state of things in England, the people who do most harm are the people who try to do most good.” “Slavery was put down in America, not in consequence of any action on the part of the slaves, or even any express desire on their part that they should be free. It was put down entirely through the grossly illegal conduct of certain agitators in Boston and elsewhere, who were not slaves themselves, nor owners of slaves, nor had anything to do with the question really. It was, undoubtedly, the Abolitionists who set the torch alight, who began the whole thing.”

Wilde provides shocking insights into the nature of governments with its continually legitimized violence, and the need for voluntary politics (voluntaryism). “Authority and compulsion are out of the question. All association must be quite voluntary. It is only in voluntary associations that man is fine.” “Every man must be left quite free to choose his own work. No form of compulsion must be exercised over him. If there is, his work will not be good for him, will not be good in itself, and will not be good for others. And by work I simply mean activity of any kind.” “*Every Law, That men have made for Man, Since first Man took his brother’s life, And the sad world began, But straws the wheat and saves the chaff, With a most evil fan. This too I know—and wise it were, If each could know the same—That every prison that men build, Is built with bricks of shame, And bound with bars lest Christ should see, How men their brothers maim.” “The State must give up all idea of government. It must give it up because, as a wise man once said many centuries before Christ, there is such a thing as leaving mankind alone; there is no such thing as governing mankind. All modes of government are failures. Despotism is unjust to everybody, including the despot, who was probably made for better things. Oligarchies are unjust to the many, and ochlocracies are unjust to the few. High hopes were once formed of democracy; but democracy means simply the bludgeoning of the people by the people for the people... The form of government that is most suitable to the artist is no government at all.” (Wilde is referring to Zhuangzi from Ancient Taoism, as the man before Christ — theliberator.us/tao) “One is absolutely sickened, not by the crimes that the wicked have committed, but by the punishments that the good have inflicted; and a community is infinitely more brutalized by the habitual employment of punishment, than it is by the occasional occurrence of crime.” “It is indeed a burning shame that there should be one law for men and another law for women. I think that there should be no law for anybody.”

As the common attack against Abolitionists, the voluntaryist view upon governments is labeled as “utopian.” However, Wilde shares with us why this is a superstition. “Is this Utopian? A map of the world that does not include Utopia is not worth even glancing at, for it leaves out the one country at which Humanity is always landing. And when Humanity lands there, it looks out, and, seeing a better country, sets sail. Progress is the realisation of Utopias... It will be what the Greeks sought for, but could not, except in Thought, realise completely, because they had slaves, and fed them; it will be what the Renaissance sought for, but could not realise completely except in Art, because they had slaves, and starved them. It will be complete, and through it each man will attain to his perfection.”

In conclusion, as with many writers who spoke about the nature of things from a timeless and universal perspective, or those who sought beyond the current form of society and looking toward the better future, Oscar Wilde’s words will continually come back to life, and it is our role to learn from his heartfelt struggles and critical observations. Will scholars study the true nature of slavery? I invite you to read my book “Slavery Gone For Good: Black Book Edition” (theliberator.us/book) to learn more and hear from many more perspectives.

How Money Works ~ The Federal Reserve Problem & The Solution

By ArtofLiberty.org (Etienne de la Boetie2), Edited by Cory Edmund Endrulat

In 1913, organized crime banking interests lobbied and bribed Congress to pass the Federal Reserve Act, which created the private Federal Reserve (FED, FR) to back-stop and “legalize” the ability of private banks to create money out of thin air and lend it at interest. The process is called fractional reserve banking, and the basics of the swindle is that when you go to the bank to get a mortgage, the bank is not lending you another depositor’s money. They simply create the money with a few strokes on the keyboard, and the average person spends the rest of their life paying interest on a loan created out of thin air. If a bank gets in financial trouble and/or experiences a “run-on-the-bank” where depositors begin to pull their money, the FED steps in and provides the troubled bank(s) unlimited capital to maintain faith in the crooked system.

In addition to the inherent unfairness of allowing certain companies (banks) the monopoly privilege of creating money, the process steals the purchasing power from the dollars earned and saved by everyone else in society. As the banks create more and more dollars, the excess dollars begin to compete with the existing dollars in the market, bid up prices, and simultaneously reduce the purchasing power of existing dollars in circulation.

This is the main reason why the cost of almost everything in the economy (housing, healthcare, education, energy, etc.) is going UP; when absent the organized crime money system, costs should be going DOWN as innovations and productivity improvements reduce the costs associated with producing the necessities and luxuries of everyday life. To reiterate, not only is society being robbed by the inflationary theft of rising prices, but it is being robbed of the reduced costs and growing purchasing power that would exist absent the organized crime banking system. Absent the anomalies of hot housing markets and hot stocks, it isn’t that the value of your home and portfolio are rising; it now simply takes more rapidly depreciating dollars to buy the same amount of housing and stocks.

A 2011 study called The Network of Global Corporate Control analyzed 37 million global companies and 43,060 transnational corporations, and they built a model of who owns and controls what. They discovered that just 147 firms, primarily banks and financial institutions, control 40% of the global wealth. Currently, there is even more concentration than ever, with Vanguard and Blackrock collectively controlling around $16.5 Trillion. Vanguard had $8.1 Trillion under management in 2022 with Blackrock managing $8.49 Trillion as of the 2nd quarter of 2022. Blackrock and/or Vanguard are among the three largest institutional investors for 505 out of 505 of the S&P 500. (100%) One or the other is the single largest institutional investor in 422 of these. (84%)

In what may appear to be a mockery of the people or tax slaves, the private Federal Reserve and US Treasury have made US banknotes the exact same color as monopoly money. Once backed by gold, which was/is mandated by the Constitution, the rapidly depreciating FR notes are now backed by the worthless promises of a bankrupt empire. At the same time, the banks engaged in fractional reserve banking have bought up all the plant, property, equipment, real estate and other hard assets.

Imagine you are playing the game Monopoly with a group of people where the banker is cheating and giving himself unlimited funds. At the end of the game, who owns everything on the board, and who are renters and debtors? The ability to create money out of thin air has enabled the banks to:

1. Buy, consolidate, and weaponize the media into nothing but deception and distraction.
2. Provide unlimited funds to a small handful of organized crime companies to consolidate their own industries and trade as a cartel.

Unfortunately, the death of the dollar appears to be approaching and the organized crime system behind the “government,” fractional reserve banking, and the control-of-perception media appear to be whoring out the US Dollar as the information revolution begins to expose the theft of trillions. Could wiping out the US dollar and the tax slaves be in the cards? Definitely!

Educate Others - Please share this article, ArtofLiberty.org & TheLiberator.us

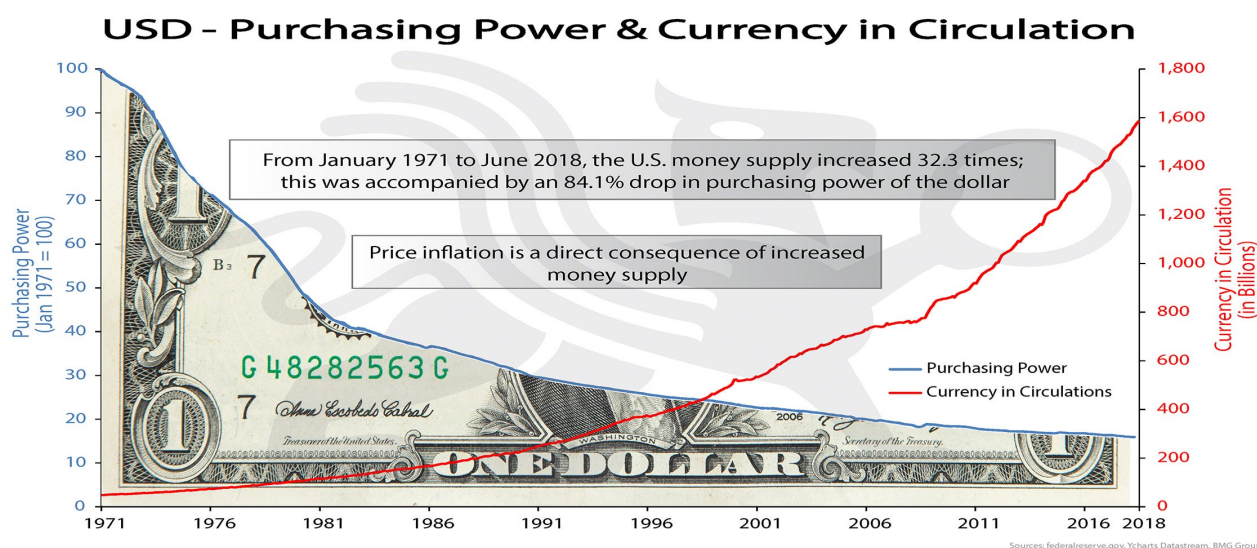

Use Cash, Crypto, Gold/Goldbacks, Silver and Other Dollar Alternatives - The more your community is diversified away from the USD, the better prepped you are to weather the storm of a currency collapse or devaluation.

Boycott the Money Center Banks in Favor of Credit Unions - If your bank is a corporate member of the Council on Foreign Relations or the World Economic Forum then you have the wrong bank. Choose smaller banks not involved in funding crooked politicians and ESG. Pick credit unions.

Boycott Digital Dollars (as Much as You Can!) - Shop at farmer’s markets, brick-and-mortar retail, and bank branch locations in person when possible. Pay cash even for large payments like rent and taxes.

Vote with Your Feet - Move to voluntaryist communities or help in their creation. (ex. The Free State Project in New Hampshire, or Food Forest Abundance with Jim Gale)

To Learn More: Century of Enslavement by The Corbett Report

Religions Of All Kinds ~ An Experience By Former Cop

By Daniel Arnold, Edited by Cory Edmund Endrulat

It is important to understand the honest views of people who live in our world, to observe their mindset and how they go about in seeing plausible change. Former law-enforcement for over 20+ years, Daniel Arnold shares with us, “I was recently in a Jewish, Christian, Muslim religious forum where followers of those faiths argue and bicker with one another over their only slightly different beliefs. It started with a post by a Christian in that group, a picture of a nun and a female follower of Islam.”

Arnold states that the Christian then elaborated with the following:

“The first is a nun. Dedicated to god, she vow not to marry. Her profession is pray and fasting, full of peace and kindness. The second one is the opposite. Have nothing to do with it. It doesn't matter the clothes, but the soul.”

Abruptly, Arnold stated that “religious people are mentally ill.” A top contributor and administrator of the group tagged him and replied: “It's the western countries where depression is a big and growing problem, seems to be growing as atheism is growing.” Below was Arnold's response that is worth noting. He tells us that “as would-be educators, we must engage religious people in a manner that is educating, truthful, thought provoking but yet balanced as to not be insulting, while also not placating them.”

“Atheism is a religion. Religiosity is the bane of this world. It is used by states throughout the world in all our shared human history to control and enslave us. I am a spiritual being who has died twice, and there is a ‘god’ with a capitol G, but it isn't some bearded dude in the desert sky. We have been fooled and bamboozled. The belief in so-called human authority to rule over other humans is a religion as well. The genocide in Palestine is a direct result of religions, and the evil that comes with them. If the people of the world had even a clue as to the nature of our existence, all citizens would stand up and say enough! And we would be unenslaved just like that.

*How come every time a researcher or archeologist finds a discovery in the middle east there is always a war that forces them to leave? What truth about human history lays in that area of the world that ‘they’ do not want us to find out? I do get depressed at times, but it is not because I am an atheist, it is because people cannot even define what a human right is, and that morals can be known, but are ignored. I love people — and I hate those who would rule others. I am by far not perfect, but I have reconciled all contradictions within my beliefs.

We already live in a one world government. That was made abundantly clear 4 years ago when the governments of the whole world worked in tandem (after the 2019 G20 Summit) to put masks on our faces and lock us all down. They like us arguing over the low hanging fruit and minutia — it makes us do their jobs for them. I say humanity unites and forces these beings to do their own dirty work and accrue their own negative consequential effects of Karma. This is not all human driven. I research for truth, and not to validate some already predisposed blind belief. If some 9-year-old in grade school had not told us that Santa Clause was fake, we would be murdering one another over Rudolf the Red Nosed Reindeer. Much Love. Agape.”

Arnold in concluding why he wrote what he wrote, states, “I feel a need to leave you, the reader, with a final thought. In this digital age we live in, social media and engaging others via the internet is where some (some) of the battlefield lays, and memes is part of that ‘battle.’ But the reason the good guys temporarily won in the 80's is because we did not have internet or social media back then – so, our collective activism had to be in person. Has social media made us lazy? Soft? And not effective? Was it created in part by dark social engineers for this exact purpose? Just some things to consider as real in person action will most certainly be required soon.”

Daniel’s Work: SpiritualAnarchist93.com

HUMANITY IS NOT SLEEPING
IT'S IN AN INDUCED COMA

The Controlled and the Controllers

1. Television
2. Mainstream Media
3. Money
4. Big Pharma
5. Peer Pressure
6. Education (indoctrination)
7. Internet (general)
8. Social Media
9. Computers, Smart Phones Tablets, Media Devices
10. Microwave/EMF
11. Vaccinations
12. Video Games
13. Chemtrails
14. Organized Religion
15. GMO
16. Chemicals (food+general)
17. Transhumanism Transgenderism
18. Environmental Disasters
19. Disconnection from Nature
20. Fear
21. The Police State

IT'S TIME TO WAKE UP
FROM DEEP STATE MIND
CONTROL PROGRAMS AND INSERTS